PRESENTATION

A recital is a form of concert for one instrument: in this case the soloist uses the body to execute a series of postures according to a score of notes suspended in the silence, meditative. As the many poses are taken the movement circulates within the audience's imagination... The body exposes its simple mysteries through the fecund power of evocation. The very graphic nature of the ensemble, the work with silhouettes, Yasmine Hugonnet's humour, all echo the materiality of presence: the fluidity of muscles, a head that disappears into the floor, inversions, hair that is multi-purpose... Pinned to the whiteness of the stage the body affirms itself and lets itself be forgotten just until it finds its voice and speaks to us from inside the skin..."

Patrick Bonté, Director of Les Briggittines International Festival, Brussels, Belgium

"I like to think of the form of the performance as a choreographic rite: in the vibratory space between the performer and the spectator, one can witness the birth of the idea of a Body. But this body is not that of a dancer, it is a symbolic body, archetypal, social, as well as a place of communication.

Each form may be a posture, one that evokes a relation to the self and the world, in the same way the art of sculpture does. What is it that orients us as we try to identify whether a body has good or bad posture, strong or weak, lazy or efficient...? What happens in the interstices between these extreme postures? I envisage the posture as a reservoir and alter it using its own contents.

The movement continues constantly whether it is visible or not, even in apparent immobility. This is what makes it possible for there to be movement "inside" the posture, to move the point of anchorage. I am seeking to make the proximity that exists between In – posture and Im-posture vibrate."

THE POSTURE AND IMAGINATION

Each form may be a posture that evokes a relation to the self and the world, in the same way the art of sculpture does. Our bodies are composed out of a reservoir of images of postures that stem from our own personal experience and also that which we share through our culture and its representations. So what orients us in our identification of whether a posture is good or bad, strong or weak, lazy or efficient...? What happens in the interstices between these postural extremes? I collect unnamed postures and attempt to re-appropriate the ones that seem familiar, and to question them. In order to do so I play with the different elements from which they are composed: intention (directional and muscular), tone, form, figure, expressive potential, sensation... I envisage the posture as a reservoir and alter it using its own contents.

The choreographic composition is a result of an exploration of the elements that together make the body move. Each texture or layer from the skin to the bones, the organs in implicated in a process of de-hierarchization of the body's many parts. The movement is constant whether visible or not, even in apparent immobility. This is what permits the movement "inside" the posture, to move the point of anchorage. I am trying to make the proximity that exists between In-posture and Im-posture vibrate, to expose the negotiation at work when we construct our own image and all the adjustments that we make in order to correspond to it.

Together the performer and the spectator generate the dramaturgical content

I always try to maintain some element of the posture while altering an aspect of it, which allows the attention to be focused on what happens when there is a change and the manner in which new content is appropriated. This process of composition creates a particular kind of space for the performer and spectator. The performer must be extremely engaged in each instant of the body's composition and intention while at the same time freed from the responsibility of dictating the dramaturgical sense that it produces. In this way the body is both actor and witness. This process also allows the spectator to identify with the gestural proposition that he or she is witnessing and to recognize its formal content while attributing to it an affective dramaturgy that is based on his or her own feeling. In a certain way the spectator constitutes their own vision of things and has access to words from a language that they may choose to assign or not.

The basis for this, or rather my desire, is to attempt to support a posture that is not only choreographic but also "productive", in that I may reconcile an intense engagement with abandon, passiveness, or in any case a certain porousness. Is it possible to produce movement while being open and amenable, sensitive, receptive and engaged? The idea is to reconcile the dancer's active engagement with a detachment in regards to representation. The dancer is at the centre of all they feel but what they feel is not what articulates the choreographic discourse even if it does much to constitute it.

OTHER IMPRESSIONS

Philippe Saire, director, Sévelin Theatre 36 in Lausanne (this text was written on the occasion of Question de Danse in Marseille):

“At first glance this Récital des Postures resembles Arte Povera, the aridness of silence, the naked body, its solitude. But what emerges from these elements generates a feeling in the spectator about the piece that I could almost call lyrical. This feeling comes first from the piece’s structure, which immediately removes us from the habitual rhythms of waiting and renewal, and carries us off into another temporality. What is there is there in spite of us. The postures become tableaux or sculptures that come to life indubitably each time. The naked body makes itself up, hair gets done, and we traverse a series of bodies represented as in painting as a human fresco unfolds before our eyes. This dance of postures also has its own song, and is aptly entitled Recital. This silent piece exudes a strong musicality, that of each posture and its transformations, the strangeness of this traversed body. Finally, if the piece’s strangeness captivates us, it is also probably because the performance is infused with a deep tenderness and with a humour that gives way to this tenderness, and reminds us that we too do what we can with what we are.”

Patrick de Rham, director of the Festival les Urbaines in Lausanne (published on Facebook):

“A wonderful performance from Yasmine Hugonnet... The subtle encounter between the world she creates with a singular vocabulary and the sensitive references of each person in a diverse audience... A moment of grace and a very precious discovery.”

PRESS EXCERPTS

Cécile Dalla Torre, La Courrier, Geneva, 2 December 2015

“There is a lot of noise surrounding her, after the troubling solo she created in Spring 2014 in Lausanne. A delightful and heartening commotion that touches a sensitive spot everywhere Yasmine Hugonnet performs. Sometimes there are key works, that are accomplished and ripe, that mark us. Le Récital des Postures is one of such works...”

Corinne Jaquiéry, La Liberté, Fribourg, 15 March 2014

BIOGRAPHY

Yasmine Hugonnet

Yasmine Hugonnet is a choreographer, dancer, and researcher, born in Montreux in Switzerland. From 2 to 6 years old she lived in Mali. Back in Switzerland she started dancing ballet and at fifteen moved to contemporary dance. She studied at National Superior Conservatory of Dance in Paris, interested by contact improvisation, Butoh and composition. In 2000, after few months in New York (Trisha Brown, Movement Research workshops...) She started creating in the frame of the collective of artists Synalephe, exploring various frame of performances, site specific, interactive pieces, video works, and a practice of dance and performances with visually impaired persons, spending two years in Taiwan.

As she looked for a more critical context, she moved to The Netherlands joining a Master Degree in Choreography called "Dance Unlimited" program (2003-2005); half practice and theoretical based master degree, she researched upon the notion of "Presences" in performances, studied Butoh and Laban Movement Analysis. In 2006, Laureate of MapXXL program by European Pepinières for Young Artists, she went to Ljubljana Slovenia for an artist residency where she collaborates with various artists and institutions (En Knapp, Maska, Plesni Theater). With a focus on embodiment and vision, she created RE-PLAY (2006) a trio that was invited at Impulz Tanz (8:Tensions) Festival in Vienna, Tanzhaus NRW Dusseldorf, Gibanica Slovene Dance Platform in Ljubljana. Then Latitudes de Pose (2007), a solo that has been presented at Mladi Levi Festival Ljubljana, Festival Arts Danthé in Paris, Les Incandescences Festival...She kept working in close collaboration with the Slovene scene and developed a site specific piece Of Other for the City Museum in Ljubljana and a group piece AAAAA, Solo for four voices, (2008-2009) that co-produced by Maska Sovenia and Tanzhaus NRW Düsseldorf.

From 2009 to 2013 she took a long period of research that is followed by the constitution of her Company Arts Mouvementés in Lausanne and three solos: Le Rituel des Fausses Fleurs in 2013, Le Récital des Postures in 2014, (invited by Swiss Dance Days 2015, Brigittines International Festival Bruxelles, Swiss Cultural Center Paris, ADC Geneva, Bonn International Solos festival...) La Traversée des Langues (2015) premiered at Festival Les Printemps de Sévelin, Programm Commun Vidy & Arsenic.

In this period she developed her dance language with a focus on the relation between postures, attention and imagination. Deepening her understanding of the movement of attention, the germination of figures, the idea of postures as containers; within her processes she developed a practice of ventriloquism. Her work has been oriented by few important encounters such as Peter Goss, Odile Rouquet, and Lisa Nelson.

She is associated artist for two years (2015-2017) with Théâtre de Sévelin 36 in Lausanne.

In 2016 she created La Ronde / Quatuor at Festival Rencontres chrégraphiques Internationales de Seine-saint-denis and Venezia Dance Biennale. In 2017 she created a new solo Se Sentir Vivant that premiered in March 2017 at Arsenic (Lausanne), part of Festival Programme Commun.

In 2017, Yasmine Hugonnet is awarded by Swiss Dance Award (dance creation) with Le Récital des postures, which has toured internationally and be performed more than 60 times today. In November 2018, she created a new work for 3 dancers, Chro no lo gi cal at Théâtre de Vidy, Lausanne (CH).
